DETAILED ACTION

This is responsive to Applicant's RCE filed on 12/13/05.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 13-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yokomachi et al [USPAT 5,483,608] and in view of Helmer [USPAT 3,885,205].

Yokomachi et al disclose an optical switch for switching plural optical fibers and the method comprising:

A platform 20 [fig. 15] that pivots about an axis of rotation, and having a range of motion that includes a stowed position and a deployed position;

Art Unit: 2874

A hard stop 19c [as shown in fig. 15] proximate the platform 20, thereby defining the deployed position;

A motor 19 having an actuator arm [element between 19 and 19c]; and

A push/pull spring 32 [fig. 15] operatively coupling the platform to a motor assembly, and adapted to preload the platform against the hard stop, thereby holding the platform in the first position despite opposing forces.

Yokomachi et al disclose every aspect of claimed invention except for the rotating motor assembly.

Helmer discloses a controlled rotating motor.

It would have been obvious to the ordinary skilled person in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Yokomachi et al device to include the Helmer's rotating motor for the purpose of controlled variable speed and constant torque [Helmer's abstract]. It is clear this improve the Yokomachi et al device.

With respect to claims 14 and 15, Yokomachi et al show in Fig. 27 a controller 31, which commands deployment and non-deployment of the optic.

With respect to claims 16, 17, 19, and 20, Yokomachi et al show in fig. 1 a sensor 13, and a linear encoder 14.

Response to Amendment and Argument

Applicant argues that Yokomachi does not describe movement of the platform as claimed in claim 13.

Examiner does not agree with Applicant's argument because as shown below, the fig. 15 clearly shows the pivot point [end of the element 28 close to element 17]. The platform 20 is rotational from the pivot point axis of rotation.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1-12, 14-20, and 22 are allowed.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: the prior art does not disclose or suggest an optic switching system and the method comprising all the specific components with the specific combination including rotating a shaft of the motor, wherein the shaft is coupled to the push/pull spring as set forth in claim 14. The reasons for allowance of claims 1-12 are discussed in the previous Office action.
